mr We publish the following article from the pen of Professor McClintack, who was a passenger in the steamer Asia, on her late voyage from Europe. The letter caplains itself, and was communicated to the New York Ob-

"Messrs. Editors As 1 sailed to Europe in the steamer-Washington, of the Southampton and Bremen line, and returned in the Asia, the new Conard ship, I have had an opportunity to form some estimate of the comparative conforts and advantages of the American and British steamers; and, with your permission, I will state some of the results of my experience. filt will be remembered that the Washington is several years old, while the Asia is the last and best product of British skill. Yet, after having sailed in both, I have now to say, if I were setting out for Europe to-day, and the two vessels word to sail together, I would freely pay twenty dollars more to go in the Washington than in the Asia. The comfort, ease, and enjoyment of our passage out was so great that we really left the ship with regret; while on the return voyage, though we had far more agreeable wenther, and the' most favorable winds, the days dragged slowly and wearily along.-The ship is very uneasy and uncomfortable, and she rolls badty in a moderate sea, at least in comparison with the Washington. The table in the latter contained all the luxuries the market could afford, and the service was in every respect unexceptionable; that of the Asia afforded little or noth ing to tempt the capricious appetite of sen-sickness, and you had not even a nankin at the dinner-table. We had very heavy weather; for several days going out, yet I do not remember that the Washington ever shipped a pint of water; but on the return voyage, with a far quieter sea, there were few days in which the decks were -not more or less wet. This difference a rises from the very construction of the vessels, the Asia lying comparatively low in the water, and having no upper deck above the saloon, as all the American steamers have.

" I bore testimony in a letter some months ago to the excellent qualities of Captain Flayd; of the Washington, both in point of seamonship, and of kind attention to his passengers. And the watchful attention of Captain Junkins to the noble vessel dider his command. He certainly inspired his pasrs with the fullest confidence in his skill and care as a commander.-Nor, although his manner is destitute of the susvity and ease which so generally mark the American sea-captain, have I any fault to find, with him in point of attention to his passengers,-The deficiencies of the ship and of the table are, I am persuaded, to be charged neither to Capt. Judkins, nor to his excellent neward, Mr. Emmons, but rather to the systematic parsimony of the British and North American Stennship Company.

" On board the Washington we had religious services with a sermon, on each Sunday, to which the passengers, with few exceptions, gave respectful attention; nor did I learn that any were offended by the use of the cabin for such a purpose. In returning we had no less than nine clergymen of different denominations in the Asia. On the first Sunday out Capt. Judkins was asked whether a sermon could be had from one of the ministers in the sa' toon. He replied very politely that if and dirtied everywhere. there was any immster of the Church | The Pope is received of England or of the American Episcopal Church on board he could be invited to officiate; but that according to his orders, none others could be asked to preach on board his ship. He distinctly placed the responsibility of this procedure upon the Company, whose orders he said, were imperative. Accordingly, on the first Sunday out; he read the Church of England service. himself to the crew, and such of the day the stenner left was eleven. passengers as chose to attend in the ! saloon. But on the second Sunday, a minister of the Church of Scotland (Presbyterian) preached with the consent of Mr. Cunard, the chief agent of the line, who happened to be on board. Though all the passengers were glad that this worthy man had been asked to preach, some little curiosity naturally arose to know what had become of the "imperative rule;" and one of the company incutioned the subject to Mr. Cunard, hinting in a very courteous way, that such a course of proscription, offending, as it heevijably must, the religious feelings of a large proportion of the American pattengers was bad policy for the Cumurd fine -The reply was clothed in punguage that I do not care to repeat, but its substance was, that the Americans might "stay away," as they would, as soon as they were satisfied with their own steamers. Mr. Cunard, spoke with me upon the subject; and alfane language that fell from his lips in the "excitement," I do him no injustice by saying that he was determined to yield nothing to the feelings, of his American patrons. When it is remembered that perhaps three-fourths of all the passengers by the Cunard stermers, from the beginning, have been Americans, the reasonableness of this course may be better appreciated.

"I have said nothing of the Ochin's line of steamers ; but the world known or ought to know, that in all appliances of comfort for a sea-voyago at they are immeasurably superior to the Cunard steamers, and they will prove themselves, I have no doubt, just as superior in strength and speed ! When this line is fully affort, I am inclined to think that Mr. Cupard will find the Americans " staying away" to some purpose. As things are, while the Washington, Hermann, Atlantic and Pacific, are crossing the Atlanticion friend of mine, with my consent, will make the voyage in a Cunard stramer. J. M'CLINTOCK
